

From barley to hops.

The origin and fortune of beer from the Mediterranean to northern Europe

National Archeological Museum Antiquarium Turritano

Wednesday, September 20th, 2017 at 6:00 p.m.

Barley, malt, hops: three words that reveal the origins and secrets of beer. To understand its evolution throughout history, the methods of production and delving into its current economic value, the Sardinian Museums Organization, in collaboration with the town of Port Torres and brewery BirrAjò in Sassari, on Wednesday, September 20th, 2017 at 6:00 p.m., with extended opening until 10 p.m., is organizing at the National Archeological Museum Antiquarium Turritano and in the archeological area of Turris Libisonis, Porto Torres, a conference under the name of “From barley to hops. The origin and fortune of beer from the Mediterranean to northern Europe.” Three themed conferences are in the works dealing with history and social value of a drink that has been spread throughout the Mediterranean since its conception.